The 2nd floor of the Hellenic Museum is the design and construction area where the permanent exhibits are being designed. It starts out with a story board of pictures, videos and written ideas on one wall.

Our guide, Mary Alukos, explained the progress as we walked.

On the first floor there was a temporary exhibit telling the story of the Greeks historically and currently.

The 3rd floor housed a library and the 4th floor included an outdoor viewing area that overlooked the city.

In front of the museum, along Halsted Street, the ICLers wait to walk down to Rodity’s.

The Annunciation Greek Orthodox Cathedral was built by the first congregation in Chicago.

The altar inside and surrounding areas were bright and beautiful. The walls, covered with paintings of saints, and the domed ceiling were spectacular.
